InDialog: interpreting, an institutional and international necessity

International Conference on Dialogue Interpreting, 15 - 16 November in Berlin

Berlin. Migration and globalisation are creating new challenges for institutions. The need for quality translation and interpreting has become abundantly clear. To address these new demands, a new international conference, InDialog, on the subject of dialogue interpreting, is due to take place in Berlin, from the 15 - 16 November 2013 in the Russisches Haus der Wissenschaft und Kultur. The conference is being organised under the auspices of the longstanding EXPOLINGUA Berlin, the international fair for languages and cultures.

InDialog is aimed at government representatives, policy-makers, service providers, users and commissioners of signed and spoken interpreting services, researchers, trainers, interpreters, language and cultural mediators, and students. The conference will be a forum for networking and the exchange of research findings and best practices.

In lectures, debates and workshops, experts from all over the world will explore the relevance of dialogue interpreting in such fields as healthcare, the legal system, public services, education and mediation. Expected thematic priorities are “Human rights and empowerment”, “Policy and governance”, “Dialogic interaction and interpreting settings”, “Quality assurance and best practices”, “New technologies and hybrid forms of interpreting”, “Research methodologies and training” and “Professional status and accreditation”. The languages of the conference will be German and English.

Proposals can be submitted until the 31 May 2013, in German or English. Please use the online registration form at <http://www.indialog-conference.com>
